

Comptroller of the Currency
Administrator of National Banks

US Department of the Treasury

Biographies

Michael C. Drennan Director, Treasury and Market Risk

Mike Drennan is the director for Treasury and Market Risk at the Office of the Comptroller of the Currency (OCC).

In his current position, Mr. Drennan is responsible for developing bank regulatory and supervisory policies and examiner guidance for trading, interest rate risk, liquidity, securitization, derivatives, and dealer activities. He also serves as the agency's primary liaison with its cadre of capital market examiners.

Mr. Drennan joined the OCC in 1985. Throughout his career, he has held positions of increasing responsibility that focused on direct supervision of large and small banks. Mr. Drennan joined Treasury and Market Risk in 1997 after five years of working in regional bank supervision in the Southwestern District.

He received a bachelor's of science in accounting from the Sam M. Walton College of Business at the University of Arkansas in 1983 and is a certified public accountant (CPA).